

CORRUPTION IN SYRIA: LESSONS LEARNED

A STATEMENT BY
EMAN SHAHOUD

Given the lack of legislation and the need for new laws to combat corruption, it must be enshrined in the constitution by establishing an anti-corruption commission. The law should regulate the procedure for selecting the members of this anti-corruption commission, its powers, and whether these are judicial powers or investigative powers that will ultimately be delegated to the judiciary.

To me, this is an important constitutional clause in the process of drafting the constitution.